

University of Pretoria Celebrates World Social Work Day 17 March 2009

Social work students and lecturers proudly wore their specially designed t-shirts for World Social Work Day. The students moved around on campus to make this event visible. The day was further celebrated on campus by students, lecturers and practitioners who were all invited to a seminar where Prof James Midgley from the University of California, Berkeley addressed us on social development and the challenges posed to social welfare and social work within the current global economic crises. The University of Pretoria really made this a world celebration by blending the local with the international (guest speaker). Prof. Midgley received a t-shirt from the fourth year class representative.
